

Package Substrate Change for Spartan-3A and Spartan-3AN Devices

XCN08014 (v1.0) October 20, 2008

Product/Process Change Notice

Overview

The purpose of this notification is to announce the standardization of remaining Spartan®-3A devices to the current 2-layer substrate for the FT256 and FTG256 packages. All other Spartan FT/FTG256 devices currently use 2-layer substrates including Spartan-3A XC3S700A and XC3S1400A devices.

Description

This change is to standardize FT256 and FTG256 in the XC3S50A, XC3S200A/AN and XC3S400A to the current 2-layer substrate package construction. All other Spartan devices, including the XC3S700A and XC3S1400A, use a 2-layer substrate for the FT256 and FTG256 packages. The 2-layer substrate has equivalent performance and specifications to the 4-layer substrate and there is no difference in the fit or form between these substrates.

Products Affected

This change affects all speed and temperature variations of the commercial (C) and industrial (I) grade devices for the three affected devices using the FT256 or FTG256 package. Automotive XA I and Q grade devices are already offered in 2-layer and are not affected.
